The Coronavirus took hold here in Delaware in mid-March 2020 uprooting our daily way of life. The economic ramifications in Delaware and across the country have been far reaching. Here at the Food Bank of Delaware, we have been on the frontlines of this devastating economic upheaval. Families who once donated their money, time and food to the Food Bank, are now in need of services themselves. The essential services of the Food Bank of Delaware and our network of partners are needed now more than ever.

While 2020 was a difficult year, our hearts are full. Despite the many hardships the entire world has faced, we have been fortunate to see the best in so many Delawareans. Over the past few years, thousands of Delawareans have volunteered their time, given generously of their treasures and donated valuable food resources to make sure that our fellow Delawareans have a hot meal on the table.

Thanks to the support of so many, in the past fiscal year, we have distributed 14,497,316 pounds of food to our neighbors in need. We extend our heartfelt thanks to our community for stepping up during this unprecedented time for our community.

OTHER HUNGER-FIGHTING PROGRAMS: DELAWARE FOOD WORKS

The mission of the Food Bank's Delaware Food Works initiative is to eliminate food insecurity through workforce development and social entrepreneurship. Through its workforce development programming, Delawareans can receive the training needed for a new career in as little as 11 weeks. Programs are available in food service and logistics/warehousing. An agricultural program will be available in Spring 2021.

Last fiscal year, 83 students graduated from The Culinary School and L.O.G.I.C. (Logistics, Operations, General Warehousing and Inventory Control).

Training for a different career, learning new skills and going to school in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic has required both students and staff to adapt. In March, the January 2020 classes came to a halt as stay-at-home orders were issued. Delaware Food Works staff transitioned from teaching to focusing their time fully on community food distributions to meet increased demands. Students were able to complete their coursework remotely and an outdoor graduation celebration was held in early July.

Classes now meet remotely and in small in-person groups for hands-on experiences in the warehouse and kitchens. Culinary students also play an active role in preparing foods for sale in the farm stand and a weekly soup meal purchase.
OTHER HUNGER-FIGHTING PROGRAMS: FOOD BANK FARM & FARM STAND

We officially started growing on the Food Bank farm at the Newark warehouse in Winter 2018. After three years of hard work, we are starting to bear the fruits of long days of labor.

During just the 2020 fiscal year, more than 4,600 pounds of vegetables were grown on site. Our first season of growing in the field was a success with harvests of eggplant, tomatoes, greens and more. Two high tunnels continue to produce a variety of vegetables. Over the summer, we enjoyed a healthy crop of peppers, tomatoes, squash, zucchini, basil, and more.

The farm produce is sold on-site in the Food Bank Farm Stand throughout the year. It is also distributed through the farm’s Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) membership program and through the on-site Healthy Pantry Center. The produce has also been incorporated into The Culinary School training program, providing hands-on experience for the students. A spring plant sale took place in May 2020 for the general public, and plant starters were also distributed to Healthy Pantry Center clients and Food Bank partner agencies.

Proceeds from farm sales benefit the Delaware Food Works workforce development initiative.
